

A Level Film Studies

Why study Film at A Level?

The UK film industry ranks amongst the world's leading countries. The sector provides exciting and constantly evolving career pathways for young people.

You will have the opportunity to gain important knowledge about film, and will also develop your creativity and ability to express yourself.

What will I study?

You will study the progression of film making from silent movies through to the present day. You will study significant film movements in an international context, and will also consider the contrast between independent productions and those from major movie corporations.

A Level film study allows you the opportunity to pursue your interests and curiosity in terms of both style and modern technologies. You will also learn about the working of the industry as a whole, and about audience attitudes and responses.

Study trips, visits and events

There will be opportunity to work with film makers to learn more about careers and everyday working lives.

Subject entry requirements

5 in GCSE English Literature or Language.